LATE TELEGRAMS.

The Franco-Siamese Treaty. London, November 12.—The publication of the Yellow Book on Siam has not allayed the opposition of the French Colonial party to the bill. The Yellow Book covers the negotiations since 1893. Siam in 1900 refused to negotiate unless Chantabun was evacuated. M. Deleasse, on the 15th January, 1902, declared, that France would consider it an unfriendly act if Siam afforded facilities to foreign enterprises on the Mekong. The book concludes by saying that, as it was urgently necessary to close a matter wherein time was working against France, the Convention was signed on the 7th October last.

Lord Kitchener at Khartoum. November 8.—The native officers entertained General Lord Kitchener at Khartoum to-dey.

Lord Kitchener said he was glad of an opportunity of thanking them for their good service under him which the suddenness of his departure in 1899 then provented. November 10 .- General Lord Kitchener opened the Gordon College at Khartoum. He said he was satisfied with the progress made, and hoped, on his return from India, he would find the College firmly established on the lines originally conceived.

The Arbitration on India's Military Charges.

November 11. - Lord George Hamilton mentioned yesterday evening that Lord Alverstone will act on the abritration ROOMED HOUSE (Corner Lot). between the India and the War Offices regarding increased pay to the soldiers.

November 11.-Lord George Hamilton, replying to further comments on that part of the Indian administration wherewith he was least satisfied, which related to the promotion of railways, said speedier machinery was needed. Mr Robertson, who was appointed in 1900 to investigate the management of Indian railways, has been to America, and is about to proceed to India to make a fina' report, whereon Lord Curzon will doubtless make suggestions, probably in the direction of excluding the railway as far as possible from general administration and assigning it to experts. He deprecated the remission of taxation

Sir M. Bhownagree advocated taking the opportunity of organisation by the Government of the new Colonies to remedy the grievances of Indians, and hoped Mr Chamberlain would deal with the questions on the spot. He urged, amid cheers, the extension of Lord Carzon's term.

Burma Petroleum. Calcutta, Nov. 11 -The Bougal Chamber of Commerce publishes a letter dated today, refusing the request of the Standard Oil Trust agents to intervene with the Go-vernment on behalf of the Trust over its application for a Burmah petroleum con-

Mr Libby, of the Standard Oil Company, of America, has addressed an important communication to the Bengal Chamber of Commerce concerning the governmental discrimination against the Standard Oil Company and emerican petroleum, and solicits attention to an international opisode of commerce, the gravity of which extends far beyond the immediate corporate or financial issues involved.

Mr Libby submits the text of a communi-cation he addressed to the Government of India during his visit to Simla last July, in the course of which he says that about two years ago the attention of the Standard Oil Company was specially and frequently called to the possibility of rapidly increasing the potroleum production of Burmah; and at a period when our entire commerce east of the Suez Canal was under careful advisement the Standard Oil Company decided to send several experts to Burmah to study the patroleum situation there from the standpoint of production, transportation, manufacturing, and marketing. As a net outcome of the reports of the said experts the Standard Oil Company decided to venture a conservative investment in the petroleum industry of Burmali, not with the intention at the outset to take any part in production, but merely to construct a refinery and purchase crude oil from the many bage or small producers and then allow the enterprise to naturally develop.

It is reported that the American Ambassador has asked for an explanation of the refusal of the Indian Government to allow the Standard Oil Company a footing in Burmah.

It is understood that Lord Lansdowne has referred the complaint to Lord George | 14

DE WET'S BOOK ON THE WAR. LONDON, November, 30, 1902.

De Wet's book on the late war in South Africa, which is dedicated to 'my follow subjects of the British Empire,' has been published. It is severely critical, but not acrimonious. It disparages Lord Roberts' generalship, which it declares was lacking in foresight: General Buller had to face by far the more difficult task. It apparently respects Lord Kitchener, but dubs his block-house system the block-head system. It ridicules the British scouting. It alleges British barbarities against women, children, and the aged, and, although cases are not specified, it says proofs can be produced in hundreds. It concludes with an appeal to the Boers to be loyal to Great Britain.

"TANBAN" IN COURT."

'Tansan,' described as 'a sparkling beverage, the product of a natural mineral spring, was exhibited in court in a dozen different samples, and its trade marks discussed by counsel. It was a motion on the part of Ea Shu and Co. to discharge an ex parte injunction granted J. C. Wilkinson of Japan, restraining the first-mentioned of Tadaniura, from using the name 'Ton-Ban' in description of their bottled mineral water sold under that name, and also from using a label which plaintiff alleged was protested by registration. The argument of the legal points at issue occupied the court during the forenoon. They are of considerable importance, the application in this generalising the word 'Tansan,' being Hastings). Mr Slade grounded his application on the fact that when the exparte injunction was granted the defondant was not represented in court and had no opportunity of disproving the statements upon which the plaintiff relied and upon the strength of which the Chief Justice made the order of restraint. The label to the use of which by the defendants the plaintiff took exception, was stated in affidavit to be protected by registration. As a matter of fact that particular label was not registered The plaintiff sought a monopoly of the word Tansan.' The Japanese court had decided that the word had a general, not a particular significance. The plaintiff had

Mr Pollock submitted that what the Japanese Court decided was utterly day, 29th ult., resulting in a victory for irrelevant, and all they knew was that it was part of a judgment—an extract from a decision which did not concern them. inasmuch as they were not trying the case de novo. He submitted that Tansan meant a particular thing which was the plaintiff's; that it was a name invented by the plaintiff; that people purchased it because it had, through its excellence, established by the plaintiff, become popular: and that it had not yet come to be regarded in the wide range of meaning according 25 to which, for instance, whisky or soda were regarded. It had not ceased to 3 mean a particular thing, that particular thing being the beverage which plaintiff Total (for 3 wickets)..... 149 had popularised. If these things were to he gone into, his lordship would, of course, I have to consider the question of user in the Colony. 'It was possible that in Japan the word 'Tansan' might have become of more or less common use, so as to denote to the Japanese the general generic term of mineral water. But that did not bind Hongkong, and in Hongkong 'Tansan had not that general application. His Lordship said he had come to the conclusion that it was his duty to discharge the original order he had made, and he did so with costs. His Lordship-Do you give an undertaking. Mr Slade Mr Slade replied in the negative. The defendants were merely agents, and they did not want to fun any risks. They admitted that the use of similar labels would be unfair to the plaintiff, but what they objected to was the exclusive use by him of the word Tansan.

LONDON LETTER.

(From Our Own Correspondent.) LONDON, October 31.

Mr Chamberlain carries with him into Africa the good wishes and admiration of all, even his continental enemies. Some of us are rather anxious about the personal risk that a man of his age and sedentary habits, entirely unaccustomed to travelling. must necessarily run in exchanging an English November for the South African summer. Johannesburg in January is as hot as Hongkong in July, but has the advantage in dryness. No thought of his own peril has crossed Mr Chamberlain's mind. The journey is a much more severe enterprise than his visit to America about the Fisheries question fifteen years ago, yet I doubt not he will do it cheerfully and come back as youthful as ever with his perennially cheerful smile, and as indefatigably bright as the blossom in his buttonhole. Energy is almost too mild a word for the Right Honourable Joseph. He is in tensely masterful. He turned Birmingham inside out thirty years ago, when hearetired from the screw trade, and, since then, he has been an embodiment of the spirit of the times, an imperial radicalism. The late Laureate had the idea that-

'That man's the best Conservative Who lops the mouldered branch away.' Mr Chamberlain is not the man to wait for a branch to moulder. He has a dis ciplined impatience with whatever may be good enough but might be better, and if it took us into a war, for which our antagonists were readier than we were, it will not be applied to make rapid strides to a peaceful settlement for which we are readier than they are. It is a remarkable sign that the statesman who did not hesitate to say couple of years ago that, had the war been his own, he would have regarded it as a feather in his cap, should now be going in the Cape's own warship, not to exult ever victories, 'to ride in triumph through Persepolis,' but to reconcile the vanquished, and

The great value of the book will be its unconscious self-revelation of the author as a pathetic anachronism, a seventeenth century Dutch Calvinist, who ought to have been a Hearlem burgomaster during the rise of the Dutch Republic, but who lived a strenuous life among the unfamiliar law. circumstances of the nineteenth century. A NEW YEAR'S TRIP TO CAN-TON, 1902.

In the afternoon, Mr Ball and I visit the Honam Temple, or Ocean Banner Monastery, as it is also called. Archd. Gray, in his 'Walks in the City of Canton,' states that it was founded in 1662. It covers many acres: There are about 150 priests connected with it. Very dirty, slipshod, slovenly fellows they seemed, with heads sharen entirely and a sort of greasy, unwashed appearance. I saw them as they were finishing their evening meal. arrangements for preparing this and for seating the gentlemen for whom it was intended were necessarily extensive. The 'dining pavilion.' or refectory, was large Queen, as a Danish princess still earnest and airy, and its attractiveness might have in her love for her own country, must been increased somewhat had it been more follow the proceedings in Berlin and than half clean. In the gardens were ponds in which were live fish (offerings sacred to Buddha), and where water lilies and other water-flowers grew, and, on the banks, willows, &c. little bird of gorgeous gold and green plumage attracted my eye here, as it flitted about among the trees.

A CHINESE TEMPLE. This temple and grounds are on the Island of Honam, opposite Canton City. Inside the outer entrance-which was very plain-at the end of a paved walk, through a large courtyard, quite 300 feet long, I should say, and leading into the compound proper. temple gates. They might well be likened to Bunyan's characters Gluttony and Sloth. These beasts are kept alive at the expense of pieus Buddhists, who, of course, do not believe in putting any creature to death.

The pigs usually get so fat that they cannot walk. The present 'incumbents of the living' were huddled up close together, snoring vigorously in a corner of their spacious and well-kept apartmentthousands of the lords of creation, who herded together in the great city round about. Some sacred goats also grazed about the compound, but poor 'Billy' was over a lean fellow, even in a monastery, which proves him, of course, to be in fact, as by Nature intended, but a 'goat' after all Sacred fowls there used to be, but 'tis said that some of the pious folk resorting thither loved them well, and, at times, found their attachment so strong that where they went the fowls went too, at least as far as their own lodgings, where, it is suspected, their Helmund. sacred character ceased. All these creatures are placed here as offerings by votar ies, who, for blessings received, have vowed to preserve life. He must have been a specialist, as it was surprising the speed with which his task was done. Though we 'hustled,' he was too quick for us, and when we got down he finished his job and stood with his back to the gate facing us, demanding cumsha. Mr Ball paid a trifle - he would not tell me what, but our warder not being satisfied, and starting to make a row, Mr Ball laid hold of him, and, pushing him bodily aside, pulled out one of the bars, through which I pass, Mr Ball following valuable time, he wanted money, which
